The problem is that I want to store the filename of the logfile that is being processed and the filename of the logfile that will be replacing the old one. In my script I use a variable that contains the filename of the logfile which is being replaced and I would like to be able to change it. This is my script so far: $LogFileToCompare='some_file.log' $ErrorLogFile='error_file.log' Send-MailMessage -To 'test@outlook.com' -Subject "Test message" -Body "Test Body" -SmtpServer'smtp.test.com' -From 'test@test.com' -BodyAsHtml -BodyAsHTML -BodyAsText -BodyAsPlainText -Attachments "LogFileToCompare=$LogFileToCompare" -AttachmentLogFile="LogFileToCompare=$ErrorLogFile" In this example the logfile that gets compared is'some_file.log', and the logfile that will replace it is 'error_file.log'. The output I'm currently getting is this: PS C:\Users\bladie> Send-MailMessage -To 'test@outlook.com' -Subject "Test message" -Body "Test Body" -SmtpServer'smtp.test.com' -From 'test@test.com' -BodyAsHtml -BodyAsHTML -BodyAsText -BodyAsPlainText -Attachments "LogFileToCompare=some_file.log" -AttachmentLogFile=some 3ef4e8ef8d
