Photoshop Elements is not as full-featured as Photoshop, but it is available as part of Apple's OS X operating system. This article is an essential guide to using Photoshop Elements and how to edit images. Save a copy of your current document before making changes, just in case. Before you begin, make sure you can see and edit the image you are going to edit. If you don't have Photoshop Elements, download it for free from the Adobe website. Using Photoshop Elements If you are new to Photoshop Elements, there are some good tutorials that are quite simple to follow. You will also find the community on its Adobe community page. Photoshop Elements comes in two versions, Standard and Extended, and so you should download the one you need. If you're looking for a free version, the Standard version will be the version you want, but if you are looking for the higher-quality features of the other version, then you can select that option at the beginning of the download. To access and use Photoshop Elements, you will have to be logged in to your Adobe ID. Go to the Adobe website and log in to your account. To use Photoshop Elements, you have to create a new document. All of your saved documents will be stored in your Documents folder in macOS. The documents you save in Elements are normally stored in a new, untitled file. You should save this file for future use, or just keep it in your Documents folder for easy access. Depending on the file you have open, you will need to tell Elements which program to open the file in. If the document you want to edit was previously opened in another program, you will need to open it in Photoshop Elements first, and then import it as a new file. The following guides show you how to import an image that was previously opened in Photoshop into Photoshop Elements so you can edit it. How to import an image into Photoshop Elements Steps 1: Open the image you want to edit Now that you have downloaded the program, you'll have to open the image you want to edit first. For example, if you have downloaded the program, but saved it in a Downloads folder inside your Documents folder, you will need to go to the Downloads folder, click the file and then drag it over to the Photoshop Elements icon in the Applications folder. “Hate in America” is a term that has been used repeatedly by both political sides since the election of Donald Trump. We have seen Democrats like Washington’s Rep. Maxine Waters call on her supporters to harass Trump and his associates in public places. President Trump has taken to calling certain media outlets the “Fake News,” a term coined by author and comedian, Stephen Colbert. However, Sunday night, Trump took to Twitter to send out another warning. “Fake News CNN and NBC are going out of their way to disparage our great country and it’s people. They even have their phony legal counsel out there,” he began. “Unfortunately, it is all too believable!” Fake News CNN and NBC are going out of their way to disparage our great country and its very successful President, me. They even have their phony legal counsel out there. Don’t worry, we will bring justice to their dishonest lives! — Donald J. Trump (@realDonaldTrump) August 26, 2018 While it is unclear what Trump meant, he was likely referencing a recent MSNBC show called “Rising.” “Rising” appeared to show the network’s bias against the president and his family. Within the first 15 minutes, the hosts made a variety of attacks against the president and his family. Since the attack, the two CNN hosts have been under fire by other reporters and the network’s own employees. Although “Rising” has been widely criticized, the two hosts’ response has been extremely odd. As Deadline Hollywood noted, the pair have refused to admit any wrongdoing or apologize for the offensive statements on the show. Instead, they have argued that it is all part of their “fake news” strategy. “We are not going to validate their version of fake news,” Eason Jordan, a former NBC News host, wrote on Twitter. “We are trying to change the conversation.” CNN TV host Roland Martin responded by tweeting a message to all of the network’s employees: “I’m getting calls from CNNers demanding apology. Please don’t ask us to do what we don’t want to do.” CNN’s Abby Phillip chimed in by tweeting, “You can’t edit the
