The Birth of FIFA It all began in November 1953 when Joseph Siffredi and Robert Ancel, former students of the École Nationale Supérieure des Mines de Saint-Étienne, sat in a room in a small office in the Mines and put together a computer program. They conceived of a hypothetical football game, where players would be able to control a ball and kick it to one another using keyboard and mouse inputs. It was a revolutionary idea at a time when no one had ever heard of video games. Unbeknownst to them, their work would one day lead to a virtual revolution in sport gaming and cement the iconic brand name FIFA into the history books. It took less than a decade for the title to appear on shelves, developed by a small French studio, Origin Systems, and named "Penguin Soccer",
